

Maria Sibylla Merian Center for Advanced Latin American Studies in the Humanities and Social Sciences

Call: Up to three senior research fellowships at the CALAS headquarters in Guadalajara, Mexico

The Maria Sibylla Merian Center for Advanced Latin American Studies (CALAS) in Guadalajara, Mexico, is accepting applications for a 4 to 8 month Fellowship for highly qualified Post-Doctorate Researchers. According to the CALAS research program, applicants are expected to contribute to the development of new methodological and analytic approaches to understand the changes and crises in Latin America. This may include a revision of Latin-American approaches, theories, and methodologies that deal with crises.

Thematic scope

Latin America has acquired significant experience in dealing with multiple crises. In facing these challenges, theoretical and empirical approaches are generated that are of importance not only for the region, but also for the general understanding and solving of the current problems of humanity. CALAS's transdisciplinary research program "Coping with Crisis in Latin America" focuses on critical questions of how crises and processes of change are triggered, accelerated, decelerated, perceived, and reflected by different actors in Latin America. What strategies arise in the process to deal with crises at multiple levels? How can new approaches to solving problems, including those of a transregional nature, be effective or institutionalized?

The thematic proposals that are presented must address in one way or another these CALAS guiding research questions and its general approaches. In particular, projects that show interest in more than one of the research axes covered by CALAS and whose academic profile guarantees the interdisciplinary theoretical and methodological approaches necessary for research in CALAS are welcome. In this regard, it is expected that the proposed Platforms for Dialogue will contribute to reflect, deconstruct and decentralize the Western-centered state of knowledge about concepts, dynamics and solutions, and to adapt them to the context of the region.

Conditions

The fellowship is open to experienced postdoctoral scholars in Social Sciences and the Humanities. In addition, scientific work and reputation will be valued as well as experiences in the main topic and the quality of the presented project. An effective operational command of Spanish is required.

CALAS is committed to inclusion and gender equality. It expressly welcomes applications from appropriately qualified severely disabled and disabled persons. The CALAS fellowship-program aims for gender parity and is promoting affirmative action policies.

The fellows are expected to be in residence in Guadalajara and participate in CALAS activities and events. They will have the opportunity to make use of the resources of CALAS and the respective host institution, the University of Guadalajara, including office space, access to libraries and research facilities.

The monthly stipend is EUR 3,000. In case the applicant holds a permanent position, the fellowship can be used to finance a temporal replacement.

In addition, fellowship recipients will receive reimbursement for their round-trip airfare to Guadalajara and to travel to one of the CALAS affiliated Centers, where the fellow is expected to present his research in a public conference. Family support and a small amount for research travel expenses to work in libraries and archives will also be available. CALAS is unable to provide accommodation for its fellows but local administrative staff will help in finding suitable places for rent.

CALAS offers two possibilities to publish research results: in the form of a long-essay (pocket-books of about 80 pages), edited by CALAS. If this option is not chosen, fellows are expected to publish their results in at least two academic articles. The search of an adequate publication facility is up to the authors.

At the end of the fellowship, it is expected that the fellows give an account of his/her activities in a five page report.
